A BRIEF HISTORY

Across the street from 1790 stood the old Wesson Tavern where General Lafayette took dinner and drink on his journey to Boston to lay the cornerstone of the Bunker Hill Monument. Children sang and gave him flowers as several soldiers who had served during the Revolutionary War greeted him.

In 1810, Route Nine, the first turnpike in the country, was built. During the construction, the 1790 House was moved south for it was resting on what is now the Boston-Worcester Road.

The 1790 House has eight working fireplaces and boasts of over fifteen rooms. This Federal home is a typical "Country Estate" characterized by high ceilings and the absence of exposed beams.

Your Function Information

Thank you for considering the 1790 Restaurant & Tavern for your upcoming business or social event. We specialize in personalized hospitality and the highest quality food and beverages. Our spectacular grounds with a real gazebo and a meticulously restored 1790 Federal Mansion will make any event a success.

The house is seasonally decorated, adding a festive character to your surroundings. Each of our rooms has a look of its own and most have fireplaces. Whatever the season, the setting of our meticulously restored 1790 Federal Mansion amidst beautifully landscaped grounds, including a gazebo, make every event special.

Please inquire about Spring/Summer/Fall outside functions.
